

FIONA MIGAN

Fiona Migan's professional background is in copyright policy and she is currently the main point of contact, information and advice for government schools on copyright matters.

Fiona was most recently responsible for the roll-out of the National Education Access Licence for Schools scheme in NSW, a national initiative to reduce copyright costs by making materials available to other schools and educational bodies.

She also works closely with the National Copyright Unit on the development of national copyright policy and is a member of the Copyright Advisory Group, a national committee representing copyright managers in each State and Territory and the non-government school sectors.
